on Wednesday for Vancouver, via Toke-THE 'Odd Volumes' are nothing if not odd. It is now more than a year since this Society passed a resolution—either it or its Committee to exclude the Press from its meetings; and, so far as we know, this is the most sensible thing it has done during its existence. But finding it could not live without publicity, it has shown a ten-Quiros, Irene, Phra Chom Klao, Castilla, I dency to call in the mid of the much abused Press, a move which we are serry to use the members of the Press have not combined to stop, so long as the former resolution remain unrescinded. The prospect opened up by a long course of . Odd Volume meetings is not a cheerful one. No possible good can accrue from the publication of an ill-considered address like that delivered recently by the Acting Chief Justice, in the course of which he passed public strictures upon the minor officers in his own Department; and we question if the pearls that fell from the Head of the Education Department on the difficult subject of the Philosophy of the Sub-conscious were appreciated at their true worth. And when a Society -of Odd Volumes -or any other name-descende from 'The Philosophy of the Sab-contribus' to the discussion of such subjects as What is the best part of the Colony to live in the we think it is a fair inference that it has reached the height of absurdity. A correspondent has called our atlention to this matter. We think with him that as much good would result from the discumber of any of the subjects mentioned in our correspondent's letter. We would advise our correspondents to leave the 'Odd Volumes alone. They will be found out in course of

The mobilishtion of an army corps is, however, a very ments. It has to be made self-sufficient both as to artillery and cavalry as well as infantry, and judging from the time taken to equip the Sendai garrison, it may be soweral weeks yet before the new expedition sets sail. As to the objective of this new force, it may be presumed that it is either Shan-hai-kwan or Formosa. An independent attack on Shan-hai-kwan, with the two converging armies still at a considerable distance therefrom, would, however, seem superfluous. Even if successful, the new army would not be strong enough to advance alone upon Peking, and could but maintain its position and await the arrival of the armies already in the field. Doubtless would give valuable aid to the First and Second Armies by disorganising the Chinese defence and so permitting a rapid march from Newchwang to Shan-hai-kwan; nevertheless, when the character of the opposition already ancountered is considered, an independent attack on this point appears improbable. There pending attack upon Formora. Aware that for years past the Japanese have kept an eye upon this island, the likelihood of an attackhas been repeatedly discussed since the war commenced, and it has been generally believed that before peace was concluded the Japanese would land troops upon Formosa and take possession of the island. While the Chinese northern squadron was in existence however. such an expedition would have been one considerable risk as it would have required a strong convoy of war-ships with the result of weakening the Japanese fleet in the Gulf of Pechili to the point of danger. But the Chinese northern squadron is now completely wiped out, and all the Japanese vesicls could if necessary be sent down to Formosa to convoy such an expedition without any risk being incurred. It appears to us, therefore, that all indications point to Formosa as the destination of the expedition now being mobilised at Hiroshima. It is rumoured,-with how much truth we canwith France on this matter, and has been assured that the Republic will place no obstacles in Japan's way. It is even said that the French fleet will assemble off the const of Japan and accompany the expedition .-not of course for the purpose of rendering active aid, but simply as a demonstration that the expedition has the countenance and approval of France. However this may be, prove that French influence is actively at object to a Japonese descent on Formosa, it look for something pretty. is very improbable that any of the other WAR CORRESPONDENTS UNDER FIRE.
